Q: How to combine statement and attribute of with same name using jquery I have a table which contains columns with different data types, some of the columns have a default value for the cell, the cells with this attribute have a default value of 0. In JQuery I have a few functions to manipulate this table cells and the 's. Now I need to modify some of these cells from inside a function, but I need the 's to have the default value if the original cells had a default value. I could add a function to the function that changes the 's which has no value, but how could I do it without modifying the data in the database? function setMin(a,b){ $('th[data-min]').each(function() { $(this).attr("data-min",b); }); if ($(this).attr('data-min')!= 0) { $(this).text(a); } } Or as suggested in the comment : else { $(this).attr("data-min",b); Is there a better way to do this? A: You could do it with a single loop and a variable to keep track of whether you've set the value: $('th[data-min]').each(function() { if ($(this).attr('data-min') == 0) { $(this).attr("data-min",b); } else { $(this).text(a); }

R.N. Joe D'Cruz, who won the 2013 Sahitya Akademi Award for his Tamil-language novel Korkai, appropriately dedicated it to the people of the coast of Tamil Nadu. collected and published as a single book. . The excavations at Korkai took on great importance. D'Cruz says that in this novel he wanted to explore how people living in the south interact with nature, with the environment, with water, and how this is reflected in everyday life. . His approach to writing the novel Korkai is rather unusual for a writer from the Hindustan Peninsula, as this work takes place in the jungle of Tamil Nadu. D'Cruz calls the jungle "the most amazing and most exciting environment on earth." fffad4f19a
